Day 1

Literature

A Year Down Yonder | "Gone with the Wind" and "Ever After"

Vocabulary

skinflint: a miser, a cheapskate.

"till the next Republican administration": Hoover was a Republican, and he was replaced by FDR who was elected for a record four terms (he died in the middle of his fourth); the next Republican president was Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1953. From 1929 to 1953 was a long stretch of Democrat presidents!

antimacassars: a small cloth piece placed over the backs or arms of chairs to prevent soiling of the permanent fabric.

Lydia Pinkham bath: Lydia Pinkham (1819–1883) formulated an herbal-alcoholic "women's tonic" to help with female complaints; it included five herbs mixed in an alcoholic base; a bath probably held some of her tonic.

club reporter: a young or inexperienced newspaper reporter.

Marshall Fields: department store in Chicago.

ration card: during wartime, the government set standards on how much one person was allowed to buy in order to guarantee enough goods for military use; ration cards controlled the flow of goods.

To Discuss After You Read

3. What is the primary conflict in this book? ➔
4. Bootsie brings her kitten for Mary Alice to see. Then “she was taking her baby back to the cobhouse where they lived. So that’s the way it worked. I stood in the afternoon light and shed a tear or two” (p. 96). Now remember that Grandma, after giving away Mary Alice, “looked aside, out the bay window, blinking at the brightness of the day.” What’s the comparison? ➔
5. Mary Alice claims Grandma has “eyes in the back of her heart.” What does she mean? ➔
6. What do you think is the theme of this book? ➔
7. Is there a line or scene that stands out to you especially? ➔

Creative Expression | Morality and Law

One of the ongoing struggles we find throughout American history has been between, on the one hand, people who hold tightly to our country’s stated ideal of liberty, as mentioned in our Pledge of Allegiance and in the opening lines of the Declaration of Independence, and, on the other, those who see the harsh realities of human depravity and who want to see all injustice and unrighteousness destroyed. We can see this struggle in the Civil War; in our country’s involvement (or lack thereof) in the two World Wars; in the battles over the 19th Amendment (Prohibition); the fight to end racial discrimination; in the Viet Nam conflict; in the battle over abortion. We can also see it in the ongoing debates over whether our country should get involved in (or to stay out of) the hate-based wars of other countries and other peoples (for instance, the recent wars in Iraq and Afghanistan).

On the one hand, Americans believe in freedom: for ourselves and for other people. On the other hand, we believe in justice. We have a hard time merely “standing by” when slaves are being tortured (the Civil War), Jews are being massacred (World War II), Kurds are being bombed by their own government (Iraq in modern times), Muslims and Croats are being abused by Serbs (Bosnia in the recent past).

Your assignment today is going to be a difficult one. It asks you to begin to form your view of the relationship between government and morality, personal responsibility, and law.

The fact is, slavery had been around for millennia before the Civil War was ever fought, and it took over two years before Lincoln could even bring himself to say that the Civil War had anything to do with slavery. We know, too, that there are more slaves worldwide now than there were then, whether they be sex slaves for perverts or sweatshop slaves, working hard to bring Americans cheap sneakers.

Then, too, there were many signs that one of Hitler’s primary goals was to wipe out the Jews; yet the United States did not enter World War II until Japan bombed Pearl Harbor.

How do you respond to these things? What do you want to say? If you have a well-reasoned statement you’d like to make: make it. If you simply want to write some of your thoughts on paper and outline some of the issues as you see them: do that.

In essence, it doesn’t matter what you write, specifically; just write something about the subject at hand.

Day 2

Literature

To Kill a Mockingbird | Chapter 1

Note to Parents: Please remember that this book contains some problematic elements. You may wish to pre-read the text before you share it with your children.

Initial Comments

Author Harper Lee wrote no other works. I was surprised to find that the story has quite a few autobiographical bits: her father was a lawyer; her mother was absent; she played with young the neighbor boy (who was short, too: famous author Truman Capote). And, most incredibly, there was a family on their street who kept an errant son inside a boarded up home for 24 years. (!)

There are not many analytical essays on her book: one man estimated the ratio of sales to essays at about a million to one (the book has sold about 30 million copies). Perhaps it doesn’t need much extra explanation.

This novel fits into two genres. One is the bildungsroman, or coming-of-age. Specifically, the moral and psychological growth of a child, looking for answers. Remember any folklore tales of younger sons who go to seek their fortune? The bildungsroman came out of stories like that, but the goal is not a fortune, but maturity. Over the course of the novel, you'll read how Scout grows up.

Also, like Faulker's The Sound and the Fury, this is an example of Southern Gothic. The grotesque that makes us cringe: racial bigotry and the bizarre Radley family. The good traits that keep us reading? You'll see!

Setting

Maycomb, Alabama, in the early 1930s.

Characters

Scout, Dill, Jem, Atticus, Aunt Alexandra, and Mrs. Dubose are round, dynamic characters. Calpurnia is static (no real character development), but I think she surprises the reader, as when we find out how she taught her son to read, and how she treats the unpleasant woman at church. Miss Caroline, the Ewells, and the ladies of the Missionary Society are flat, static characters.

Point of View

First person, told by Scout (then a grown-up, recalling events of childhood).

Conflict

The climax of this book is obvious: Bob Ewell attacks the children and dies. This would make the conflict a character v. character conflict, as the Finch family v. the Ewell family. However, I think a good case could be made for character v. society, as Atticus battles injustice and prejudice, as Scout learns how the world is ugly, and how the world is good.

Theme

Even as the children have a prejudicial fear of Boo in the beginning, but grow to appreciate him and, finally, interact with him as a human, so the prejudice of the town against blacks should change. (SparkNotes.com makes an interesting argument that the book is all about the education of good and evil, and the question of whether people are basically good or basically evil.)

Vocabulary

Andrew Jackson: fought the Creek War (1813–1814) and effectively crushed the Creek people, who ceded three-fifths of present-day Alabama; later became 7th president of the United States.

Battle of Hastings: when Scout says, "Being Southerners, it was a source of shame to some members of the family that we had no recorded ancestors on either side of the Battle of Hastings" (p. 4). She means Southerners of her day cared about their ancestry, and since the Finch's couldn't prove that they were descended from either the Normans or the Saxons during the Norman Conquest of 1066, they had reason to be ashamed—a satirical comment on how important some folk believed their ancestry to be.

trot-line: a long fishing line that is towed by a boat and that supports many smaller lines with baited hooks.

Oliver Optic: pseudonym for William T. Adams who wrote Hatchie, the Guardian Slave (1853), The Boat Club series and the Blue and Grey series.

Victor Appleton: a pseudonym for a collection of writers who wrote the Tom Swift series. [chap. 1]

John Wesley: founded the Methodist movement, which began in the 1730s as a movement within the Church of England and focused on Bible study and a methodical approach to scriptures and Christian living.

To Discuss After You Read

Narrator Scout, now older, begins this first person narrative with a mention of the book's climax, when Jem breaks his arm. The rest of the story is a flashback, working toward that moment.

8. We know that "It was customary for the men in the family to remain on Simon's homestead, Finch's Landing, and make their living from cotton" (p. 4). And we know that Atticus and his younger brother both left, leaving sister Alexandra to live there. What does this tell you about the traditional way of things? ➡

Since there was nothing Atticus could have done to free his first clients, "that was probably the beginning of my father's profound distaste for the practice of criminal law" (p. 5). Thus, he probably prefers things like family law, dealing with marriages, adoption, and estate planning; tax law, dealing with taxes; real estate law, concerning land; and corporate law, dealing with the establishment and maintenance of businesses.

9. "There was no hurry, for there was nowhere to go, nothing to buy and no money to buy it with, nothing to see outside the boundaries of Maycomb County" (p. 6). While Maycomb itself is fictional, can you imagine living in a world with so little commerce and curiosity?

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in his inaugural speech on March 4, 1933, claimed that “the only thing we have to fear is fear itself.” The story’s action thus begins in the summer of 1933.

Dill, sitting in the collard patch, was hardly taller than the leaves. Collards are a green, leafy vegetable, so if you imagine a tall lettuce leaf: he was clearly a very short boy. (Truman Capote grew up to be only 5’3”.)

Dill had seen Dracula, now considered a horror classic, at the picture shows. Released in 1931, Dill could have seen it, thus, at age 5, but certainly saw it by age 7.

10. Scout doesn’t understand how Dill could have a mother without a father. How is she ignorant? ➔
11. As the children acted out books they had read, Scout calls Dill a “pocket Merlin.” What do you think she meant? ➔
12. The Radley Place drew Dill “as the moon draws water.” This is a reference to what phenomenon? ➔
13. Ignoring the myths about Boo, what are the facts about him? ➔
14. As you read about Arthur’s wild past, do you think his “crime” fit the punishment? ➔

flivver: an automobile that is old and inexpensive. [chap. 2]

beadle: a parish constable. [chap. 2]

catawba worms: the caterpillars of the Hawk moth; they eat catalpa tree leaves. [chap. 2]

union suit: a one-piece long underwear with a buttoned flap in the back. [chap. 2]

Lorenzo Dow: an eccentric itinerant American Methodist preacher, and important figure in the Second Great Awakening; his autobiography at one time was the second best-selling book in the United States, exceeded only by the Bible. [chap. 2]

hookworms: small parasites that burrow through the skin into the blood stream and digestive system, usually through the foot. They can also be ingested by drinking contaminated water. [chap. 2]

scrip stamps: paper money issued in denominations less than a dollar for temporary emergency or relief use. [chap. 2]

Works Progress Administration (WPA): The WPA employed people who were able to work but could not find jobs during the Great Depression. [chap. 2]

smilax: a slender vine often used in floral arrangements. [chap. 2]

crackling bread: pig fat fried into cracklings, mixed with cornmeal, and baked. [chap. 3]

dose of magnesia: called Milk of Magnesia; used as a laxative. [chap. 3]

last-will-and-testament: a legal document that transfers property upon death. [chap. 3]

diction: a speaker's word choice, style and expression, coupled with a clearly understood message. [chap. 3]

To Discuss After You Read

15. What does this mean: "the ragged, denim-shirted and floursack-skirted first grade, most of whom had chopped cotton and fed hogs from the time they were able to walk, were immune to imaginative literature" (p. 18)? [chap. 2] ➔
16. Jem and Scout have a funny interaction about the new form of teaching. Jem brings up the example of cows, and Scout gets confused, so they talk past each other. What were they each talking about? [chap. 2] ➔

Jem calls the new system of learning "the Dewey Decimal System." This isn't quite right: Melvil Dewey invented the Dewey Decimal System, a method of arranging books in a library. John Dewey changed the system of education in the States. As I understand it, rather than learn to read phonetically, via sounding out words, students were supposed to learn the sight word way, as Miss Caroline teaches. Studies show that one-third of children taught this way do not catch it and thus do not learn to read. Dewey changed the fundamentals of American education.

17. How poor is Walter Cunningham? [chap. 2] ➔

Mr. Cunningham went to Atticus to resolve an entailment problem. An entailment is a kind of restriction on what an owner can do with his property. Most likely, Cunningham was not the clear owner of it, and thus could neither sell it nor mortgage it to raise money. Jem's made up definition ("having your tail in a crack," from the "tail" in "entailment") is close to correct: an entailment, in this case, is a trap.

As best I can understand it, Mr. Cunningham refused to change his opinions or his speech (he wouldn't "hold his mouth right"), and wanted to be beholden to no one, so he could vote as he chose. I understand this to mean that, if he had acquired a government job, he would have been tempted to vote for the hand that fed him, whether he actually still wanted FDR or not.

Walter mentions that he's unable to pass first grade because he has always had to leave in the spring to help with "chopping." In order to reduce weeds in cotton, the family would hoe them down. Walter planned to stay in school this year, though, since a younger sibling would take his place.

Walter's parasites caused anemia, or low iron levels in the blood. Blackstrap molasses is a high-iron food; I suspect he poured molasses all over his food because he was craving iron.

18. When Scout corrects Walter's odd table manners, she learns about hospitality. How so? [chap. 3] ➔
19. We know from the first page that the Ewell's have a part in this book. We meet our first Ewell in a singular way. What do we know of the Ewells? [chap. 3] ➔
20. Science fiction writer Robert A. Heinlein wrote "An armed society is a polite society." When Burris turns mean, "Little Chuck's right hand went to his pocket. 'Watch your step, Burris,' he said. 'I'd soon's kill you as look at you'" (p. 30). Presumably, Little Chuck was armed in some way, and prepared to defend himself and others in the classroom. I have heard some argue that schools around the country, with their "no weapons" restrictions, basically make the children and teachers easy targets, and that school shootings might stop, or at least be less horrific, should weapons be allowed again on campus. (For example, had a single person been armed at Virginia Tech in 2007, the killer could have been stopped before he killed 32 people and took his own life.) Others would argue that there would be more violence, over, perhaps, petty disagreements. Do we really want Little Chuck able to kill Burris just because Burris makes some nasty comments and behaves aggressively? What do you think? Would you feel better or worse going to college knowing that some classmates or professors were carrying guns? [chap. 3]
21. Scout decides that Calpurnia was trying to make up with her. "She had always been too hard on me, she had at last seen the error of her factious ways, she was sorry and too stubborn to say so" (p. 32). Do you think this is why Calpurnia made Scout crackling bread and kissed her? [chap. 3] ➔
22. Have you ever tried Atticus' simple trick to get along better with folks: "You never really understand a person until you consider things from his point of view ... until you climb into his skin and walk around in it" (p. 33)? It might be useful. [chap. 3]
23. Why does Atticus think that the law can sometimes bend? [chap. 3] ➔

“I could not help receiving the impression that I was being cheated out of something. Second Battle of the Marne: the Germans' last offensive of WWI, in 1918; followed by the first Allied offensive victory in 1918; the first battle in which the United States suffered heavy casualties. [chap. 5]

bridgework: replaces missing teeth. [chap. 5]

closed communion: the practice of restricting the serving of the elements of Holy Communion to those who are members of a particular church, denomination, sect, or congregation. [chap. 5]

Franklin stove: invented by Ben Franklin; it operates as an enclosed metal fireplace with a narrow exhaust pipe; it allows the heat to remain in a room more effectively than a fireplace. [chap. 6]

To Discuss After You Read

“Apparently deciding that it was easier to define primitive baptistry than closed communion” (p. 49) means that Miss Maudie found it easier to explain the beliefs of the group of Baptists known as “primitive Baptists” or “foot-washing Baptists,” rather than why Methodists and Baptists were not allowed to take Communion together. [chap. 5]

1. What does Miss Maudie mean when she says, “Sometimes the Bible in the hand of one man is worse than a whiskey bottle in the hand of your father” (p. 50)? [chap. 5] ➔
2. “Atticus Finch is the same in his house as he is on the public streets” (p. 51). How about your family? Are you the same inside and outside? If not, you might expect some trouble down the road. Hypocrisy does not hide forever. [chap. 5]

The “oldest lawyer’s trick in the book” is to ask leading questions. Jem gives himself away. [chap. 5]

3. Did you understand the amazing performance by Mr. Avery peeing? [chap. 6]
4. Do you think Mr. Nathan shot his shotgun simply to be mean? [chap. 6] ➔

For those not well-versed in guns, a shotgun opens between the barrel and the butt. With a shotgun “broken across his arm,” Mr. Nathan was loading or emptying his gun. [chap. 6]

Did you note the great warning on p. 61? “next time he won’t aim high, be it dog ... or—Jem Finch!” Just remove the M-dash. [chap. 6]

Dill’s idea of strip poker is brilliant, but Atticus is more brilliant yet. In order to play poker, you need to play cards (not matches!), so his further examination shows that Dill is completely lying; Atticus knows where they had been. [chap. 6]

5. Why did Jem go to get his pants, risking his life for something that would have resulted in, at most, a “whipping”? [chap. 6] ➔

Creative Expression | Neighbors

In To Kill a Mockingbird, Scout is incredibly involved with her neighbors: not only does she have a good visual description of them (something even I have not had always), she knows their doings, and interacts with them on a regular basis.

Today, describe your neighbors, using Harper Lee’s amazing descriptions as a springboard. Write your description as a narrative—like you’re telling the beginning of a story. Feel free to incorporate myths of your own invention (as, clearly, Scout does). Have a good time as you exercise your creative writing ability.

Rosetta Stone: stone with the same message carved in three languages: Greek, Demotic (everyday Egyptian script), and hieroglyphics (official and religious Egyptian script); Jean Francois Champollion used the Rosetta Stone to decode hieroglyphics and make them readable. [chap. 8]

Morphodite: comic pronunciation of hermaphrodite, an individual with both female and male reproductive organs; their snowman, lacking genitalia, was not literally a morphodite, but was a male (Mr. Avery) with female trappings (hat, clippers) for an ineffective disguise. [chap. 8]

lane cake: a four-layer sponge cake with a raisin-bourbon frosting between layers; modern versions also include coconut and pecans. [chap. 8]

Bellingraths: a public garden in Alabama, opened in 1927 and still beautiful today. [chap. 8]

8. Why do you think Mr. Nathan sealed the hole in the tree? [chap. 7] ➔
9. Why did Jem cry about the sealed up tree? [chap. 7] ➔

If it snowed in Maycomb County in 1885, Mr. Avery exaggerates the length of time since the last snowfall by twenty years, since Lee surrendered to Grant at Appomattox on April 9, 1865. [chap. 8]

10. What do the Finch’s decide to do with Scout’s blanket and why? [chap. 8] ➔

Miss Maudie’s recipe calls for “one large cup of sugar,” which does not exist in normal baking. A “cup” is a uniform measure, so a “large cup” is as meaningful as “one long foot” or “one heavy pound.” [chap. 8] ringworm: a fungus, like athlete’s foot, that afflicts the skin, generally in circular shapes.

running a still: Prohibition, the era of US history in which alcohol production, distribution, and consumption was outlawed, encouraged many people to distill their own liquor in a moonshine still, to the disgust of law-abiding folk; Prohibition had ended in 1933, but the stigma against moonshining apparently remained.

Confederate: a supporter of the Confederate States of America during the time of the American Civil War.

General Hood: Confederate general during the American Civil War; known for bravery and aggressiveness.

Missouri Compromise: an agreement reached in 1820 between the pro- and anti-slavery factions of America on where slavery would be allowed in the western territories.

Stonewall Jackson: a famous Confederate soldier who fought under General Lee; considered one of the best tactical commanders in all of US history, he died of wounds received in the Battle of Chancellorsville.

Ol’ Blue Light: nickname for Stonewall Jackson, a Confederate general.

hookah: multi-stemmed water pipe for smoking flavored tobacco.

air rifles: a low-powered rifle that fires projectiles by means of compressed air; for example, a BB gun.

Lord Melbourne: a British statesman, Prime Minister, and mentor of Queen Victoria; the city of Melbourne in Australia is named for him; he held together the government during periods of unrest.

To Discuss After You Read

11. Why does Atticus defend Tom? ➔

Scout says that Atticus sounds like an old Confederate soldier, defeated while fighting for something he believed in (and, you may remember, that doesn’t necessarily mean slavery, so much as states’ rights). This, along with Atticus’s assurance that he will not win, does not bode well.

“Then Christmas came and disaster struck”: an example of foreshadowing, a hint of what’s to come. In this case, Scout will lose her self-control.

12. What does Uncle Jack mean when he says, “that was what was known as relativity” (p. 89)? ➔
13. What is Scout’s meaning when she says, “The internal arrangements of the Finch house were indicative of Simon’s guilelessness and the absolute trust with which he regarded his offspring” (p. 91). ➔
14. Aunt Alexandra overheard Scout say “hell.” What other bad word did she not hear? ➔
15. Earlier, Jem risked death to fetch his pants to keep Atticus’ respect. How does Scout imitate Jem in this chapter? ➔

16. When Atticus says to Jack, “you had the right answer this afternoon, but the wrong reasons” (p. 99), what does he mean? ➔

To Discuss After You Read

Scout said early on (p. 6) that Atticus was “already middle-aged” when he married. He would have been about 36 when he married; Uncle Jack and Miss Maudie are almost 40, and Aunt Alexandra somewhere between the two brothers.

17. Why is it a sin to kill a mockingbird? ➔

18. What benefits do Scout and Jem have because of their father’s age? ➔

19. Miss Maudie says, “People in their right minds never take pride in their talents” (p. 112). This appears to contradict Earth Woman in Indian Captive, who believed pride in a task well done was good and right. What do you think? ➔

When Scout says that Atticus came home “Two geological ages later,” she makes use of hyperbole (hi PER bowl ee), or exaggeration, to reach her meaning: the afternoon went so slowly, it felt like millions of years.

dog-trot hall: a hallway running from the front door to the back door in the middle of some houses built in the 1800s; it was referred to as a dog-trot hall because the dogs could pass straight through the house without entering any of the rooms.

CSA pistol: a pistol belonging to the Confederate States Army.

camisole: a sleeveless undergarment for women, normally extending to the waist.

calomel: a colorless, white or brown tasteless compound, mercury chloride, used as a purgative and insecticide; obviously, not a compound you'd want to ingest, as it contains mercury.

To Discuss After You Read

Scout tells Atticus that he must be wrong because “most folks seem to think they’re right and you’re wrong” (p. 120). Atticus replies, “before I can live with other folks I’ve got to live with myself. The one thing that doesn’t abide by majority rule is a person’s conscience” (p. 120). I think this is a good point.

1. Atticus tells his daughter, “it’s never an insult to be called what somebody thinks is a bad name. It just shows you how poor that person is, it doesn’t hurt you” (p. 124). Does Jem learn that, too? ➔
2. Why do you think the author included chapter 10 and 11 in the book, since both the mad dog and Mrs. DuBoise are introduced and die in a single chapter? ➔

Creative Expression | What If ...

This week you’ll be using your imagination a bit. What if Walt Whitman and Emily Dickinson met at the library? What would they talk about? Would they meet for coffee later or for a stroll in the park—or maybe the woods? What would they think of each other?

Your task is to write a one-to-two page narrative/dialogue between Walt Whitman and Emily Dickinson. To prepare, re-read the short biographies on these two poets, found in A Treasury of Poetry for Young People. Jot down a list of distinguishing characteristics of each poet, so you can better picture them in your mind as you write.

Next, choose one poet to be the narrator. You will write your narrative from this poet’s perspective, and therefore craft his (or her) opinion of the other poet. Think about how each poet would have sounded as they spoke. Would they speak in prose...or in the style of their poetry, perhaps? From their biographies, what do you know of their personalities? How can you bring those out in your dialogue?

The setting—beyond meeting in the library— and the course of their conversation is up to you. Decide what you think they would discuss and how the conversation would end. Will you describe any action besides the words the two poets spoke? Try to convey their body language and give hints about what’s happening around them as they’re talking to each other. Help your audience see a clear picture of the entire scene. By the end of your piece, your audience should have a clear understanding of what one poet thought of the other. Be creative!

Octagon soap: a harsh lye soap used primarily for doing laundry but often used as an all-purpose soap as well.

Castile: Castile soap, named after Castilla, Spain, is made from olive oil and is incredibly gentle. It is often used for babies and as face soap.

Mardi Gras: French for “Fat Tuesday”; the last day before Lent, celebrated with wild parties, carnivals, masquerade balls, and costume parades.

First Purchase African M.E.: “coloreds” church purchased with their first earnings as freed slaves.

asafoetida: an herb derived from a giant fennel plant.

Indian Bow mouth: narrow, curved (probably down), a slash in Lula’s face.

rotogravure print: a printing process where pictures are transferred from copper cylinders to a combination of paper and plastic.

Ecclesiastical impedimenta: relating to the clergy or church; objects that impede or encumber.

The Impurity of Women doctrine: Jem mentions that this doctrine is preached in her church.

“tobacco chewers were in agony”: since tobacco is an additive product, even chewers who were delayed from chewing would feel miserable. [chap. 12]

voile dress: a soft, sheer fabric made of cotton.

Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England: the most thorough treatment of English Law that one man ever produced.

3. What does it mean that Atticus worked at the state legislature because “the Governor was eager to scrape a few barnacles off the ship of state” (p. 132)? ➔

The political cartoon of Atticus in his underwear, working and ignoring temptation shows just what Jem says: he's a hard worker.

5. Comment on the first two things Aunt Alexandra says. [chap. 13] ➔
6. “Somewhere, I had received the impression that Fine Folks were people who did the best they could with the sense they had, but Aunt Alexandra was of the opinion, obliquely expressed, that the longer a family had been squatting on one patch of land the finer it was” (p. 147). Who do you side with? [chap. 13] ➔
7. What is Aunt Alexandra's theory on how to improve the children's behavior, and what are some of the pitfalls of it? [chap. 13] ➔
8. Atticus says, “It's not time to worry yet.” What extra meaning can you gather because of its previous use? [chap. 13] ➔
9. What do you think the final sentence of this passage means? “I know now what he was trying to do, but Atticus was only a man. It takes a woman to do that kind of work” (p. 152). [chap. 13] ➔
10. Earlier, Atticus tells Jem, “There was no point in saying you were sorry if you aren't” (p. 120). But in this chapter he makes Scout apologize, most likely before she is actually penitent. Why did Atticus make her, do you think? [chap. 14] ➔ change of venue: a legal term for moving a trial to a new location, often used in high-profile cases where the jury members are more likely to be objective.

Ku Klux Klan: club of white supremacists, originally formed after the Civil War, that terrorized blacks, and also immigrants, Jews, Catholics, and their sympathizers.

linotype: originally, the company that marketed a machine that allowed type-setting to be done by a machine rather than by hand.

snipe hunt: an imaginary task used to conveniently get rid of someone.

To Discuss After You Read

Scout says, "I found myself wondering what life would be if Jem were different, even from what he was now; what I would do if Atticus did not feel the necessity of my presence, help and advice. Why, he couldn't get along a day without me. Even Calpurnia couldn't get along unless I was there. They needed me" (p. 162). On one level, we see how naive Scout is: Cal could certainly do her tasks without Scout's help, and Atticus could complete his daily duties without his daughter's aid. However, I think Scout's point is a good one: how much diminished would the lives of the family be with even a one less person.

11. Why was it ridiculous that the men talked in near-whispers after Atticus told them not to wake Tom? ➔

12. Think about it: how were the two times Atticus says "Do you really think so?" in chapter 15 (pp. 166 and 172) different? ➔

13. Parents are not usually pleased with defiant children. Why, then, after Jem's defiance, do we see this: "Atticus reached out and massaged Jem's hair, his one gesture of affection" (p. 176)? ➔

Creative Expression | Literature that Moves You

Even though it was first published only in the 1960s, To Kill a Mockingbird is considered classic American literature. In a one-to-two page paper, respond to this incredible book today in some way. How did it move you? Was there some portion of it that tugged at your heartstrings, set off your justice-meter, or opened your eyes to the way American culture once was (or sadly sometimes still is)? Write about what surprised or touched you the most; write about how the world is different (or the same) from when these events happened; write about your favorite character and why; write about what makes it a classic.

Your choice. But as one of the finest works of literature ever crafted, do respond in some way. As always, plan time to review and revise your paper before you submit a final copy on Day 4.

shotgun hall: a hallway that leads directly from the front door to the back door.

slop jars: pot with a lid used as a bathroom.

frog-sticking without a light: frog gigging: a person spears a frog with a gig (a long pole with tines on the end, similar to a trident); done at night, the light both reveals where the frogs are, due to the reflection, and momentarily stuns the frog and keeps it from hopping away; a frog can have as much meat on its hind legs as a medium-sized chicken; to go without a light would be frog-sticking without the needed tools; we might say "baking without an oven" or "driving without gas."

To Discuss After You Read

2. Why did Atticus want to know if anyone had gone for a doctor? ➔

"Rut" is a term to describe deer in heat. For Mr. Ewell to use such a term about a person is extremely demeaning and crass.

3. Can you find a posture of Mr. Ewell that shows how unpleasant a man he is? ➔
4. What did Judge Taylor mean when he said, "People generally see what they look for, and hear what they listen for, and they have the right to subject their children to it" (p. 197)? ➔

6. And what two things did she say that showed most clearly how far from a normal life she led? [chap. 18] ➔
7. What evidence do you see that Mr. Ewell molests Mayella? [chap. 19] ➔

When Mr. Gilmer forces Tom to say that Mayella wasn't lying, but was "mistaken in her mind" (p. 224), he forces Tom to lie. Mayella was assuredly lying, and the listeners should have known it. [chap. 19]

8. In the previous reading, Scout noted, "Somehow Atticus had hit her hard in a way that was not clear to me, but it gave him no pleasure to do so" (p. 214). (This in response to Atticus' comment: "What did your father see in the window, the crime of rape or the best defense to it? Why don't you tell the truth, child, didn't Bob Ewell beat you up?" 1. How does the black community respond to Atticus's failure? [chap. 22] ➔
2. How did Judge Taylor weigh the case in Tom's favor? [chap. 22] ➔
3. There was some discussion in this section about Maycomb County. What did Atticus mean when he said, "It's

4. Atticus, curiously, got partially undressed before he delivered his final address to the jury. Now that you know who's on the jury, why do you think he did that? [chap. 23] ➔

Scout really doesn't understand Atticus's comment about "Two sisters married two brothers." All that means is that sisters in one family married brothers in a another family. Their children were cousins, then, from both parents. [chap. 23]

5. Scout and Jem discuss the people in Maycomb County. Jem wants to divide the people into four groups that all look down on one another: normal people, Cunninghams (backwoods, less educated), Ewells (permanent welfare recipients), and black people. But Scout dislikes those distinctions, since even Atticus at times enjoys alcohol or fiddling music. She thinks there are just folks. Jem wonders that, if that's the case, why do the people despise each other? What's your answer? [chap. 23]

Creative Expression | How I See It

For this week's writing assignment you will describe the Tom Robinson trial through the eyes of someone besides Scout. Each person brings his or her point-of-view to the trial, seeing the same situation differently. Choose one person to present, and write a journal entry from his or her perspective. Some choices could be: Judge Taylor (writing in a journal years later), Atticus Finch (debriefing the night after the trial), Reverend Sykes or someone from the colored balcony, Sheriff Heck Tate, Thomas Robinson, a newspaper reporter or anyone present at the trial<sup>1</sup>.

Be sure to write your journal entry from the first person perspective (using the word "I").

Day 2

Literature

To Kill a Mockingbird | Chapters 24–26

Vocabulary

... Miss Maudie was angry her brevity was icy ... [chap. 24]

... a publication spurious in the eyes of Miss Gates ... [chap. 26]

charlotte: a dessert made from sponge cake and fruit, whipped cream, or custard. [chap. 24]

yaws: a tropical infection of the skin, joints and bones caused by a bacterial infection. [chap. 24]

largo: at a very slow tempo. [chap. 24]

Ladies' Law: from the Alabama Code: "Any person who enters into, or goes sufficiently near to the dwelling house of another, and, in the presence or hearing of the family of the occupant thereof, or any member of his family; or any person who, in the presence or hearing of any girl or woman, uses abusive, insulting, or obscene language, must, on conviction, be fined not more than two hundred dollars, and may also be imprisoned in the county jail, or sentenced to hard labor for the county for not more than six months." [chap. 26]

To Discuss After You Read

"Out there in J. Grimes Everett's land there's nothing but sin and squalor" (p. 264). Note that the ladies' party has plenty of vicious gossip, and the concern for non-whites extends only to those on the other side of the world, and not to anyone in their own community. [chap. 24]

Much of the literary tension in Chapter 24 comes from Scout's misunderstanding of the social mores. For example, when she hears of a woman who needs to lead a moral life and have encouragement for children, she (rightfully, in my view) wonders if Mayella is the woman. But, no, it's Helen, whose husband really obviously did nothing to Mayella except help her. [chap. 24]

6. Why does Miss Maudie get angry? [chap. 24] ➔
7. What does Miss Maudie mean when she says, "His food doesn't stick going down, does it?" [chap. 24] ➔
8. Mrs. Merriweather claims that the racist ladies were not hypocrites, because they plainly acknowledged that they viewed blacks as lesser than whites, whereas the Northerners wouldn't actually treat all men the same, but just claimed that they were. Is one position better than the other? [chap. 24] ➔
9. Miss Maudie thinks the town pays Atticus what highest tribute? [chap. 24] ➔
10. Scout observes early in the party that Aunt Alexandra had a "campaign to teach me to be a lady" (p. 262). How well does that campaign succeed? [chap. 24] ➔
11. If you were giving a party and received devastating news, would you, too, try to maintain calm? What does Aunt Alexandra's calmness show? [chap. 24] ➔
12. Earlier in the book, Scout accuses her Uncle Jack of being unfair, because he only heard one side of the story before he punished her (p. 97). How does this relate to other parts of the book? [chap. 25] ➔
13. Why does Jem prevent Scout from killing her roly-poly bug, saying, "they don't bother you" (p. 273), and when, presumably, would it be okay to kill a roly-poly? [chap. 25] ➔
14. How is the comparison between Tim Johnson and Tom Robinson now complete? [chap. 25] ➔

1. Adapted from an assignment on <http://whs.babienko.net> Referenced 4/18/2017.

15. Is there much actual democracy (“Equal rights for all, special privileges for none” [p. 281] in the United States? [chap. 26] ➔
16. What purpose does the current event report about Hitler have in this book? [chap. 26] ➔

Think about Atticus’ advice to Scout: “Jem was trying hard to forget something, but what he was really doing was storing it away for a while, until enough time passes. Then he would be able to think about it and sort things out. When he was able to think about it, Jem would be himself again” (p. 283). Do you think that’s true: that sometimes we need space before we deal with a deeply painful subject. [chap. 26]

Vocabulary

- ... had purloined their furniture ... [chap. 27]
- ... his own way, untrammelled by state or ... [chap. 28]

Cotton Tom Heflin: James Thomas Heflin championed the southern farmer, then crusaded against Roman Catholics and for white supremacists. [chap. 27]

National Recovery Administration: The NRA, approved by President Roosevelt, organized thousands of businesses under fair trade codes which businesses voluntarily joined. The businesses who accepted the codes put the NRA blue eagle symbol in their windows and on the packaging of their goods. Any business that did not have the eagle seemed unpatriotic and selfish. Many businesses violated the codes, and the courts tried to enforce the NRA until, in 1935, the Supreme Court [the nine old men Atticus refers to] declared the NRA unconstitutional because many codes were an illegal delegation of legislative authority. Also, the federal government invaded fields reserved to the individual states. [chap. 27]

Victrolas: the Victor Talking Machine Company was the top producer of phonographs and phonograph records early in the 20th century; their motto included a dog sitting in front of a radio with a large trumpet. [chap. 27]

To Discuss After You Read

17. Why is Bob Ewell so angry? [chap. 27] ➔

The name of Mrs. Merriweather’s play means “To the Stars through Difficulties,” not quite the same translation she gives: “from the mud to the stars.” [chap. 27]

18. How does a mockingbird show up in chapter 28? [chap. 28] ➔

Cecil’s mother does not want him to eat after other folks, as it isn’t sanitary. Aunt Alexandra says such people are “usually climbers,” which means social climbers, who seek social prominence but are not actually accepted by others in that class. [chap. 28]

After you read about Jem’s arm, re-read the first page of the book.

- ... Mr. Tate said stolidly ... [chap. 30]
- ... coughed his dreadful raling cough ... [chap. 31]
- ... puzzled by his amiable acquiescence ... [chap. 31]

To Discuss After You Read

- Clearly, Mr. Ewell is a nasty man. He is also a fictional character in a novel. Do you agree with Mr. Tate that “some kind of men you have to shoot before you can say hidy to ‘em. Even then, they ain’t worth the bullet it takes to shoot ‘em” (pp. 308-309)? Are there such nasty characters in real life, and should they be killed? Is this a reasonable argument for the death penalty, say? [chap. 29]
- How did Scout’s costume save her life? [chap. 29] ➔
- Why does Heck say that Bob Ewell fell on his knife? [chap. 30] ➔
- Scout grieves that she never gave Boo anything. Do you think she never did? [chap. 31] ➔
- Atticus said before the trial, “I hope and pray I can get Jem and Scout through it without bitterness, and most of all, without catching Maycomb’s usual disease. Why reasonable people go stark raving mad when anything involving a Negro comes up, is something I don’t pretend to understand” (p. 100). Did he realize his hopes? [chap. 31] ➔

The book Atticus reads at the end, The Grey Ghost, was part of an adventure series. (The book is also mentioned twice in chapter one: it bookends this book.) Main character Seckatary Hawkins is the leader of “The Fair and Square Club,” with the slogan, “A quitter never wins and a winner never quits.” [chap. 31]

- What point does Scout glean from Atticus’s reading of The Grey Ghost? [chap. 31] ➔

Wrapping Up

To Discuss After You Read

- Reread the first page. Who do you side with: Jem or Scout? ➔
- How does the setting add to your understanding of the characters and the events? Could a similar set of events take place today where you live? ➔
- Evaluate the characters in the book. Find at least three round characters and three flat characters. ➔

If you wonder how much Scout has grown, consider what she says early on, about her relationship with Cal: “Our battles were epic and one-sided” (p. 6). It’s hard to imagine such a scene by the end of the book.

- There are many personal conflicts in the story. What is the conflict at the climax? ➔
- There is also a larger, societal conflict. What is that? ➔
- Reread Scout’s description of her class’s reaction when they learned where their teacher came from: “The class murmured apprehensively, should she prove to harbor her share of the peculiarities indigenous to that region. ... North Alabama was full of Liquor Interests, Big Mules, steel companies, Republicans, professors, and other persons of no background” (p. 18). What word could you use to describe this reaction? ➔
- Miss Maudie can’t just pull up nut grass because “one sprig of nut grass can ruin a whole yard. ... When it comes fall this dries up and the wind blows it all over Maycomb County!” (p. 47). How might this relate to the book as a whole? ➔
- Atticus tells his children, “I don’t want either of you bearing a grudge about this thing, no matter what happens” (p. 179), which reiterates his earlier comment, “we’re fighting our friends. But remember this, no matter how bitter things get, they’re still our friends and this is still our home” (p. 87). If you were in Scout’s or Jem’s place, how easily do you think you’d be able to carry out Atticus’s orders? ➔
- Dill wondered if Boo stayed inside because “he doesn’t have anywhere to run off to” (p. 163), and that is a good guess. Certainly a person who’s been reclusive for a few decades would have few places to receive him. Jem thinks that Boo stays inside because he wants to (p. 259), because the people outside are too unpleasant with their squabbles and unkindness. Why do you think Boo stays inside? ➔
- One internet commentator says this: “The novel exposes the loss of innocence (and innocents) so frequently that reviewer R. A. Dave claims it is inevitable that all the characters have faced or will face defeat, giving it elements of a classical tragedy. In exploring how each character deals with his or her own personal defeat, Lee builds a framework to judge whether the characters are heroes or fools.” Atticus’s defeat is quite obvious, and Atticus emerges as a hero. What is Jem’s defeat, and how does he deal with it? ➔
- What is Scout’s defeat, and how does she deal with it? ➔
- In light of that comment, what is Mrs. Dubose’s defeat? ➔

37. Finally, let's talk about the title. How is it first used? (See p. 103 if needed.) ➔

38. Who are the mockingbirds in this book? ➔
